Title:Inasmuch As It Is Always Already Taking Place

Date:1990

Media:Sixteen-channel video/sound installation

Description:

Sixteen modified 1/2-inch to 23-inch black-and-white video monitors (cathode ray tubes removed from chassis), two speakers, sixteen DVD players and sixteen DVDs (black-and-white; one with stereo sound)

Dimensions of horizontal niche: 16 h. x 54 x 66 in. (41 x 137 x 167 cm.)

Edition of two and one artist's proof

Inasmuch As It Is Always Already Taking Place consists of sixteen video monitors separated from their chassis and electronics by extended wires. Varying in size from 1/2-inch to 23 inches, they are positioned and viewed within a deep horizontal inset (measuring 16 x 54 x 66 inches / 41 x 137 x 167 cm.) cut into a wall at waist to chest level. Their arrangement as such is one of accumulation, a pile up, a kind of debris – bulbs that have washed up from the sea or perhaps stones that have broken down to smaller and smaller particles. Each one displays an autonomous fragment of a body (perhaps a reclining figure, a man reading, a corpse, etc.) as actual size (i.e. a 1-inch monitor displays a portion of a palm of a hand, or an unrecognizable terrain of skin; a 4-inch monitor displays part of a shoulder or an ear; a 15-inch monitor emits the stomach, and so on). Each image involves little movement, being a never-ending closed loop with no beginning and no end, suggesting a wavering gaze or the murmur of the body. All together there is a polyrhythmic sense to an otherwise still figure uttering barely articulated phrases and guttural noises amongst the sounds of papers rustling and skin rubbing on skin.
