...you can't stand it. Every day it also illuminates with a bright light, and you can see lots of interesting details about those things. You know we're over there. And I'm more likely to turn me away from here. It is a great deal to be illuminated on all sides.

...by a light that comes from nowhere, that only seems to push them away, attracts light towards them, and pushes them away... I'm sure that brightness is a condition to you. I'm inclined to believe that the condition that you keep to yourself within conditions where the darkness whitens, without another appearing. I recognize that I'm lying down in that position, whose boundaries are so strictly defined except at one point, remember; the mouth is also shut. It probably happened in the room. Under my eyelids I had the deep black, velvety, rich, and warm, that sleep preserves, always feel reappearing behind them, already used in many parts of myself, still alive. It went on for a long time, close to the black, maybe in it. Lightly I watched it, the book would lose its color and inevitably cause the final whiteness to rise. This is the dead. Maybe this is the

Description:

Seven modified 4-inch black-and-white video monitors (cathode ray tubes removed from chassis) with seven glass lenses housed in cylindrical hanging brackets (mailing tube card board, black heat shrink), one speaker, variably sized blank hardcover books, applied printed text, seven DVD players and seven DVDs (black-and-white; one with mono sound)

Dimensions: floor space approx. 15 x 20 ft. (4.6 x 6.1 m.)

Edition of two and one artist's proof

I Believe It Is an Image in Light of the Other consists of seven cylindrical tubes, each containing a modified 4-inch black-and-white monitor and lens, which are suspended from the ceiling at varying heights above a grouping of books. The only source of light is from the projected images, visible on the books' open pages. The images vary in size corresponding to different sized books and consist of a double face, double torso, double body, mouth and fingers, projected text, hands, and a chair. The video-illuminated texts on the books' pages, which either end abruptly with the edges of the page or become lost in the bind, are comprised of excerpts from Maurice Blanchot's The Last Man. The movement of the body and the double images play with the formal space and construction of books. Large hands in the middle move slowly and deliberately, making a clearing motion and generating the only sound one hears—a dull rubbing of the surface.

Spoken Text:

The written texts are fragments from The Last Man, 1957, by Maurice Blanchot (translated by Lydia Davis, New York: Columbia University Press, 1987).
